

Civics Connection Through Questioning

Use the following questions as a way to incorporate civic discussions and engagement in your classroom. Each question is broad enough to be applied to most lessons, and can be made more specific for a particular topic.

- How can one change, strengthen, or improve upon a social, political, or economic standing?
- What responsibilities does this topic/event/issue require of me?
- What issue(s) does this topic remind you of today? What action would you take in response?
- How does this history influence the present?
- How can conflicts regarding this topic be resolved through community and individual efforts?
- How does one contribute to an evolving political, social, or economic system individually and as a group?
- How have social, political, and economic responsibilities developed over time and how do they impact the growth of a nation?
- How do the values of a nation unite its citizens?
- How have people in power affected political, social, and economic developments regarding the freedom and protection of their people?
- Why is this topic one of particular importance for participation in a democratic society?
